

Nose Rings-Gauge & Style Info

Gauge sizes can be confusing. The higher the number, the thinner the post (the part that goes through your piercing). If you are not sure what gauge you have, ask the person who did your piercing. 18 gauge (1mm diameter) is the gauge you are usually pierced with. 20 gauge is slightly thinner (.8mm). 22 gauge is slightly thinner than 20 gauge (around .5mm) 22 gauge is the size of a regular ear lobe piercing.

Nose Ring Styles

Nose Rings is a generic term for nose jewelry. Nose jewelry is available in several different styles and there is no "right" type of nose jewelry. Any of these styles can be worn in the nose. Our customers usually make a choice based on which style they prefer, or is most comfortable for them.

Nose Bones

Nose Bones have a straight shaft with a ball at each end. We give the measurement for the straight part of the shaft (from bottom of top ball to top of bottom ball) in the description of each product. As you can see in the photo above, there is no standard way nose bones are made. The size of the ball at the bottom varies with each product.

Nose Screws

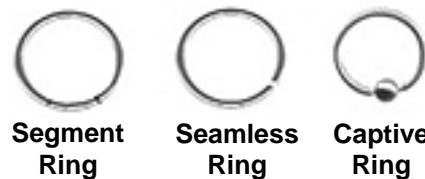

Nose Screws have a straight shaft with a circular tail. These "screw" into the nose piercing. These can be difficult to get in and many people get them put in by their piercing professional. But they are the most secure type of nose ring.

Nose Studs

Nose Studs have a straight shaft and no ball at the end. The shorter studs shown above can be bent in an "L" shape. The longer one is a bendable nose stud and that can be bent into a screw or an "L" shape.

Nose Rings

Nose Rings are literally rings. Captive rings, seamless rings or seamless rings can be worn in the nose. The ball on the captive ring is held in by pressure and pops in and out. The dimples on the ball are very small, so these can be difficult to close.
